Anonymous Donor's $1 Million Pledge Honors CTV Alum

Gift Will Support Cinema and Television Arts Department Scholarships

Cal State Northridge has received a $1 million pledge from an anonymous donor who asked that the money be used to support scholarships for students in the Department of Cinema and Television Arts.

The gift will be used to create the Scott M. Weiss Memorial Scholarship Fund and the Scott M. Weiss Memorial Scholarship Endowment in honor of a cinema and television arts alumnus and entertainment industry professional who was killed in an automobile accident in July 2008.

"This gift is not only generous, but inspiring," said Temma Willey, chair of the Department of Cinema and Television Arts. "Scott Weiss' memory will be both an encouragement and a standard for a talented, creative and enterprising student to cross the bridge from school to his or her professional life. The gift truly is wonderful."

Scott M. Weiss Scholarships will be awarded to cinema and television arts students who meet the university's financial need requirements and demonstrate promise in their major. That will be measured by their passion, commitment, creativity and effort. A recipient must be at least a sophomore and maintain a 2.5 or higher grade point average. The first scholarship is expected to be awarded later this year.

Scott M. Weiss

Karen Kearns, associate dean of CSUN's Mike Curb College of Arts, Media, and Communication, had Weiss as a student in fall 2000.

"Scott was in my single-camera television class," she said. "He and his group created a wonderful, five-minute piece called 'Silver Lining.' It was about a little girl who was hit by a car and killed. Her organs were donated and the family met the little girl who received their daughter's heart. It was very touching. It also was the first time one of our television projects won a CSU Media Arts award. Scott was the editor on that team.

"He was a great student. He was funny and he worked really well with his group," Kearns recalled. "He just added so much to the team and its ability to create this wonderful story."

Kearns said she was "touched" that an endowment for cinema and television arts students was created in his honor.

"It is so difficult to think that a student this young has left us," she said. "Yet, his legacy will live on in the work of these other students he is able to help."

Scott Weiss transferred to Northridge in 1999 after having completed his general education requirements at Pierce and Valley Colleges. He enrolled in what was then the Radio-Television-Film Department with an eye on a career in the entertainment industry.

During his final year at the university, Weiss obtained a much sought-after internship with a post-production company, earning credits toward his major at the same time. When he graduated in 2001, the company offered him a one-year contract to edit film coverage of the Salt Lake City Winter Olympics.

In 2003, Weiss was hired by RIOT, a Santa Monica-based post-production company, to work exclusively on the company's contract with the Fox Broadcasting Company. His editing skills were used to create promos for upcoming movies on the FX cable channel. Pleased with his work, Fox hired Weiss as an in-house editor in 2006 when it ended its contract with RIOT.

Two years later, on July 12, 2008, Weiss was killed in an automobile accident. He was 32. ■

CSUN Finds Creative Ways to Help Haiti Earthquake Victims

Benefit Concert, Coin Drive and Shoe Collection Among Student Lead Initiatives

Cal State Northridge will host "CSUN's Hands for Haiti" a student and professional showcase to benefit victims of the Haiti earthquake on Friday, Feb. 26 from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. in the University Student Union's (USU) Northridge Center.

The event is free but a $10 "suggested" donation will be accepted at the door. Proceeds will go to the Hope for Haiti Now fund. The showcase will feature musical performances, spoken word and slide shows by CSUN students. Organizers are also interested in cash and in-kind donations from alumni and local businesses.

"Students, faculty, staff and community members who live in the Northridge area have a history of knowing what it is like to be hit by a natural disaster," said Hamid Jahangard, the USU's program coordinator for major events. "This is what we should be doing as global citizens of the world."

In addition to the showcase, university representatives have collected hundreds of pairs of shoes to donate to Sports Chalet's "Soles 4 Souls" program. The campus' Student-Athletic Advisory Council (SAAC) gathered dozens of their "gently" used athletic shoes for victims.

SAAC also has pledged to donate its Big West Coin Drive winnings to the Children's Hunger Fund Haitian Earthquake relief.

Big West Conference institutions to participate in the annual Big West Coin Drive. The coin drive, which takes place during the month of February, helps raise money for charity. The school that raises the most money wins and the other member institutions must donate half of their proceeds to the winner's charity of choice.

CSUN Police Go Green with T3 Electric Vehicle

Three-Wheeler Improves Access, Visibility on Campus and Saves Money

In keeping with the campus' efforts to become more environmentally friendly, Cal State Northridge's Department of Police Services has traded in a few of its old four-wheeled, gas guzzling black-and-white patrol vehicles for new battery-powered three wheelers.

The T3 Motion is a three wheel personal mobility electric vehicle, designed with law enforcement in mind. Officers ride it standing up and can use it to gain access to locations hard to reach in a traditional patrol car and to improve visibility on campus.

"It makes the officers more accessible," said Police Chief Anne Glavin. "This type of vehicle has become increasingly popular."

Chief Glavin said her department decided to purchase the vehicles last year in the wake of state budget cuts. She said some of the most expensive parts of her operation were gasoline and the maintenance of gasoline vehicles. The department cut its patrol vehicle fleet by three cars and replaced them with the T3s in fall 2009.

"We saw this as a great alternative," Glavin said. "We increase officer visibility, save energy, contribute to an eco-friendly environment and we save on long-term costs."

The T3 vehicles cost between $8,000 and $10,000 each and come complete with lights, sirens, and a glove box for emergency equipment. CSUN purchased three—two for police patrol and one for parking.

Police Capt. Alfredo Fernandez said the department chose the T3 over other similar vehicles because of its "excellent" reputation. It is used on college campuses like USC and by police agencies around the nation, CSUN Police Officer Mike Reyes patrols the Oviatt Library on the T3 Motion vehicle.

including the LAPD and the L.A. County Sheriff's Department.

The T3 is the latest effort by the police department to find eco-friendly ways to serve the campus. The department has a bicycle division that patrols campus housing and the campus core. The agency has also purchased the CT Series Micro electric car to replace one of its gas trucks.

Fernandez said the T3 can travel at speeds up to 20 mph. Its zero emissions make the vehicle environmentally friendly. It is also economical with an estimated operating cost of 10 cents per day.

According to the Costa Mesa based manufacturer, other features include a zero degree-turning radius for navigating tight spots. The driving platform puts the driver nine inches above the ground for visibility above crowds. ■

Annual Disabilities Conference Moves to San Diego

Conference Will Examine All Aspects of Technology and Disability and Feature Internationally Recognized Speakers

Thousands of people from around the world—from entrepreneurs and tech industry executives to academics and persons with disabilities—are expected to gather in late March to explore new ways technology can help the disabled.

Cal State Northridge's 25th Annual International Technology and Persons with Disabilities Conference—the largest of its kind in the world—is scheduled to take place March 22–27 at the Manchester Grand Hyatt Hotel in San Diego.

"Those who attend will be able to network with visionary thinkers, learn about innovative solutions and interact with technology that has the potential to change lives in a hands-on environment," said Sandy Plotin, managing director of Northridge's

Center on Disabilities, which organizes the internationally acclaimed conference every year.

Traditionally, the conference has been held in the Los Angeles area. Over the years the conference has grown to about 5,000 attendees, forcing organizers to split it between two hotels. Organizers chose to move the conference to San Diego this year as a way of enabling its participants to gather in one place.

"For the first time in many years, we will be able to host the entire event under one roof, which is a win-win for everyone," Plotin said. "The excitement has been building since we first announced the move. The proximity of active military personnel and veterans also is a wonderful opportunity resulting from the move, and we are really looking forward to reaching out to this community."

The conference examines all aspects of technology and disability and features a faculty of internationally recognized speakers, two days of pre-conference workshops, more than 300 general session workshops and more than 140 exhibitors displaying the latest technology for persons with disabilities.

Capt. Ivan Castro, one of only three blind officers serving on active duty in the Army and the only blind officer serving in the U.S. Army Special Forces, will give the conference's keynote address at 5:30 p.m. on Tuesday, March 23.

In addition to the celebration of the conference's 25th anniversary, the U.S. Department of Defense's Computer/Electronic Accommodations Program (CAP) will mark its 20th anniversary with a post keynote special event, free services to federal employees with disabilities and wounded service members.

For more information about the conference or how to register, visit the Center on Disabilities' Web site at www.csunconference.org or call the center at (818) 677-2578 V/TTY.

The Center on Disabilities at California State University, Northridge is committed to the vision of an inclusive society in which persons of all abilities have the chance to achieve their goals and experience success. Through the provision of training and research, it nurtures learning and innovation to improve the world for people with disabilities. ■

Registration Opens for CSUN's Youth Summer Camps

Programs Offer Discounts for Early Registration, Convenience for CSUN Employees

From sports camps to drama workshops, Cal State Northridge offers a variety of summer youth programs for elementary, middle and high school students.

Registration has already opened for the Sunny Days Camp, an accredited summer camp supervised by the University Student Union. It is open to children entering grades K–7 in fall 2010. Campers participate in sports, field trips, arts and crafts, drama and swimming. The camp facility includes a swimming pool, playrooms, secure outdoor play areas and food service.

"It's an on-campus childcare alternative," said Jeremy Hamlett, commercial services manager of the University Student Union. "It's easier for faculty and staff, and it's more convenient to drop their kids off on campus."

Sunny Days offers full-day and half-day programs. The full-day program runs from June 21 through Aug. 13, and the half-day program runs from June 28 through July 30.

CSUN faculty, staff and students get a $10 discount per week. Registration is open to the public, but parents interested in enrolling their children are encouraged to pay at least an early deposit to reserve a spot.

The regular rate for summer 2010 is $200, and the CSUN discount reduces that to $190 per week. The price includes daily lunch, snack and extended morning and afternoon care, and a weekly field trip. For more information, visit usu.csun.edu/sunnydays, call (818) 677-3617 or e-mail sunnydayscamp@csun.edu.

Registration has also opened for CSUN's popular Teenage Drama Workshop, a six-week, intensive summer workshop for young people interested in theatre. It is open to students entering grades 7–12 in fall 2010. There is a $100 discount for students who apply early by March 1 and scholarships are available. For more information, visit www.csun.edu/tadw or call (818) 677-5811.

The university also offers summer academic enrichment through the Summer Academic Program for Elementary School Students (SAPESS) and the Summer Academic Enrichment Program (SAEP). Registration for SAEP, the campus' academic program for middle and high school students, opens on Feb. 17 and SAPESS' registration begins March 15. Both programs, offered through the Michael D. Eisner College of Education, run from June 28 through July 30, weekdays. Both SAPESS and SAEP offer financial aid to qualifying families and provide free tuition for children whose parents teach in the program.

For more information about the elementary school program, visit www.sapess.com or visit www.saep.net to find out information about the secondary school program.
